

The Winthrop Department of English invites our graduate students to the 19th

Graduate Scholar's Talk

“Making Nice with Messy Methods: Crafting Ethical and Inclusive Research Practice with/in Non-Inclusive Spaces”

Dr. Heather Listhartke will walk through the sometimes messy research methods and practices she employed during her dissertation research as she navigated trying to reconcile inclusive practices among cultural communities and theory with the non-inclusive culture and practices of makerspaces. Her presentation will discuss the decision-making process showing that just like writing, we have to re-do, revise, and restructure research to figure out what it should look like.

Monday, November 25th | 6:30PM | The Shack