MISSION

Model UN encourages students to engage in public speaking, diplomacy, professionalism, and achieve a compromise, leading to the crafting of innovative resolutions to tackle international problems.

Over the past five decades, Model UN conferences have helped students develop public speaking, writing, and research skills. They often provide students with their first entry point into global literacy, international affairs, and concepts, including peace and security, human rights, development, and rule of law issues. By learning about the UN as an institution, its role in world affairs, and the diplomacy involved in UN decisions, students also learn the importance of seeing matters from another country's perspective.
